

Island Stone Introduces Lava Glass Mosaic Tiles

Durable fused glass tiles feature iridescent, undulating surface that plays with light in the water

(WATSONVILLE, CA, JANUARY 12, 2021)

A paradoxically cool glass tile line, Island Stone's Lava Glass mosaics incorporate iridescent and undulating surfaces that play with light in water. The shimmery, wetscapes look is sensual and inviting, ideal for pools, showers, and other water and water-adjacent applications. The fused glass tile features durable back paint applied at over 1,025 degrees Fahrenheit, giving the tiles a brilliant, pearlescent color spanning the light and dark tones of each across a single mosaic.

"Lava Glass tiles give the illusion of glimmering water, that unmistakable aesthetic of sunlight and motion reflecting and echoing across its rippling surface," said Nigel Eaton, CEO for Island Stone. "The effect is sensual and transportive, naturally evoking the relaxed feel we experience in and around the water."

Developed by glass tile experts, Lava Glass is highly durable, meeting or exceeding all industry requirements for use in exterior freeze-thaw environments and submerged applications found in ANSI A137.2

The tiles come in six colors—Burning Ice, Cool Tropics, Deep Flow, Hazy Wave, Liquid Rock, and Solid Ash—evoking the blues and greens of island waters.
